THE ALTAR BOYZ ARE ON THEIR WAY!

The heavenly Off-Broadway smash hit musical is descending from above and right onto Chanhassen's Fireside Theatre stage! The ALTAR BOYZ are five small-town boys: Matthew, Mark, Luke, Juan and Abraham—trying to save the world one screaming fan at a time. This hilarious spoof about a Christian boy band (with one nice Jewish boy) is an evening of spectacular music, sinfully sensational dancing and uncontrollable laughs. The ALTAR BOYZ perform for you on the last stop of their "Raise the Praise" tour. With hits like "(God Put the) Rhythm In Me," "The Calling" and "Girl, You Make Me Want To Wait," the ALTAR BOYZ are out to save your soul in an evening packed with heavenly hilarity! And yet, even when it gets snarky, it is clear everyone involved has plenty of affection for both boy bands and Christianity.

This award winner will have the whole family guffawing and singing along!

"Holy Hit! Full of sharp parody, spectacular dance moves, and irreverent gags, Altar Boyz is a laugh-out-loud spoof adored by fans and critics alike. Sidesplitting songs convincing enough to be played on MTV keep up the crowd-pleasing, infectious energy delivering dynamite performances. — New York Times Content Statement: While ALTAR BOYZ is clearly a musical parody/spoof and pokes fun at boy bands (like Backstreet Boys and 'NSync) and religion, it won't result in protests from good-natured Christian audience members. It is irreverent comedy delivered innocently. Language: There is a line where they use the word "Ass" and it refers to a donkey, but it is used as a double entendre. There is a song lyric, "get the hell out," in a song denouncing the devil. The music is highly amplified and is performed with a combination of dialogue and concert-style rock. Ultra-conservative Christians may be offended with the irreverent comedy. (song lyric: "Jesus called me on my cellphone, no roaming charges were incurred. He told me that I should go out in the world and spread his glorious word." line: "Cruci-funk-shun is a disco account of our Savior's slow and gruesome death." However this material is delivered innocently and contains many wonderful messages about God's saving grace. Recommended for ages 12 and up.
